Taxes From Southern Nye

A new editor in the southern country complains that the people of that district are not receiving decent treatment in the disposition of taxes. He states the roads around Rhyolite and south of that center are nothing more than mere trails which receive little, if any attention. He appeals for indulgence and consideration but he fails to make a good case when he asserts there is a greater volume of traffic than at any time before. There is no question of the retrogression of the southern country, and while it is admitted that the new people who have come in with the development of the marble quarries are doing yeoman's service, it must be conceded that the situation is a long way from justifying any extraordinary outlay for road improvements.

It is not so very long ago that the shoe was not on the other foot and that the tax payers of this end of the county were complaining of neglect with the bulk of tax collections going to the betterment of roads between Goldfield and the Bullfrog country. This was in the days when the traffic was so great that the county was enriched by the influx of population, growth of taxes and the county could afford to spend generously in Southern Nye county.

It was in those days that the taxpayers of Rhyolite and surrounding territory felt so rich that they aspired to greater distinction by creating the county of Rhyolite. Had this movement succeeded the taxpayers of that end of the present Nye county would have had to move out to avoid the onerous expenses of maintaining and separate political unit of the state government. It was not an unmixed blessing the legislature conferred on the tax payers when they refused to listen to the specious pleas of the forthcoming greatness of that section and take a rib out of the side of Nye county. The prediction was made then that eventually southern Nye county would peter out and the bullion taxes would decline and Tonopah be given over to the coyotes to nest their young. Senator Tallman drew a beautiful picture of the desert blooming like a perpetual oasis with orchards, farms and flocks to gladden the heart of the immigrant. It is not improbable that these predictions will come to pass, but since they depend on the development of water, it is natural to suppose that the water must first be shown before the parched lands shake off their gray garb and clothe their nakedness with emerald hues.

Two Kinds of Heat

We cannot forbear calling attention to it again, for right now is the time when facts emphasize the claim, and these facts cannot be too thoroughly and widely understood.

As everybody knows, recently there has been killing heat in the middle west and east, and as a result people have died by hundreds, while serious prostrations have been still more numerous. Dispatches have kept us informed concerning the thermometric heat in the tortured sections of the country, and consequently we know that the record generally has run from 93 to 96 degrees above zero. That was the heat that killed so many of the easterners.

Last Saturday in Tonopah the weather bureau reported that the mercury climbed to 92 degrees above zero. There was not a single report of a resulting death or even prostration, and nobody expected that there would be. The day was uncomfortably warm, but that is the worst that can be said of it; it added nothing to the mortuary records, nor would it have done so had the mercury gone several degrees higher, as we know from experience.

That's your "dry heat," the subject of many a merry quip. The jest loses its flavor when we look the facts in the face, for that which means salvation from death may be of good cheer, but it is not humorous. The straight, unassailable fact is that it is moisture combined with heat that gives the death dealing capacity, and it is the lack of such moisture that safeguards man. The east and middle west, the more's the pity, have the former kind of heat, Tonopah has the latter; and that is why 93 to 96 degrees there may cause death, while 103 to 106 degrees is not feared here.

The difference between dry heat and moist heat; in it is embodied one of Nevada's most luring invitations to the easterner to come westward and thus add measurably to his chances of longevity.

George Graham Rice in the New York Mining Age states that the Goldfield National bank was closed by orders of Eugene Howell, state bank examiner, after George Wingfield decided he did not want the property. This statement is predicated on about as much judgment as the clerk in the country store with a greasy pencil behind his ear, who, when asked about certain errors, remarked that it was all by intuition and not a knowledge of facts.

The men who pulled the plug out of the bottom of Lake Tahoe and flooded the Comstock mines is an old story that rivals the periodical appearance of fiction about lost mines but nothing is too old for eastern consumption. This fabrication from the fertile pen of Sam Davis which originally appeared in the states was printed this week in a New York paper as something new.

Now that they have placed a duty on bananas it behooves the tropical farmers of Lincoln county to introduce that palatable staple, the banana, a native product. Few people realize that Nevada can produce lemons, oranges, pineapples, dates and other tropical fruits, but we do. All that is needed is some advertising and an injection of enterprise to acquaint the world with the facts.

The president of the Chinese republic and the general manager of the Chinese government railroad are Nevada products. They got most of their experience on the Southern Pacific in the vicinity of Winnemucca. They are living worthy exponents of the broad educational lines observed in Nevada. This state can grow anything from statesmen to dates.

Elko county Indians are of the progressive type according to the reports from their latest fandango in the northern country. It seems that several thousand redmen were assembled for the regular potlatch but instead of indulging in the well known fandango the young bucks and mahals enjoyed the Turkey trot in its most approved form.

In the Fifth Judicial District Court of the State of Nevada, in and for Nye County.

SUMMONS.

James A. Buchanan, plaintiff, vs. Caroline L. Buchanan, Defendant. The State of Nevada Sends Greeting to You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above named plaintiff in the above entitled court and to answer the complaint filed therein within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this summons, if served within this county; or, if served out of this county but within this district, within twenty days; otherwise within forty days; or judgment by default will be taken against you according to the prayer of said complaint.

Said action is brought to obtain a decree of absolute divorce by plaintiff from defendant, forever dissolving the bonds of matrimony now and heretofore existing between said plaintiff and defendant, on the grounds of extreme cruelty on the part of defendant towards plaintiff in falsely accusing plaintiff of improper conduct; in registering at hotels under assumed names, greatly to the humiliation of plaintiff; in refusing to allow plaintiff to see defendant and threatening plaintiff with arrest if he persisted; in telling plaintiff she had no love or affection for him and that she wanted a divorce from plaintiff so that she would be rid of him.

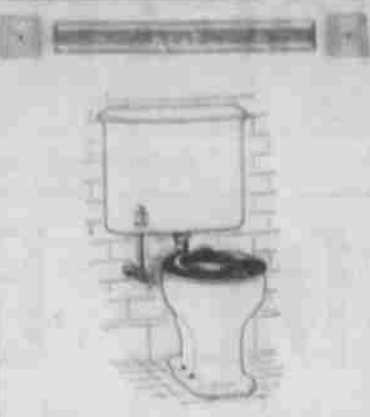

All of which more fully appears from plaintiff's complaint on file heretofore, a certified copy of which is served herewith and to which you are expressly referred.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer as above required, the plaintiff will apply for the relief demanded to the court.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand, at Tonopah, Nevada, this 10th day of May, 1913.

H. R. COOK, Attorney for Plaintiff.

22 RIFLES

The Little Rifles—Big in Quality

YOU are going to buy a .22 calibre rifle, single shot or repeater—you'll find that many well known crack shots started with a Remington .22. Their advice now would be "By all means, get a Remington" because they know that there is a tendency in some quarters to look upon these models as only "a small boy's rifle" and to cheapen them so that they can be sold at a price.

You have just as much right to expect full shooting value in your .22 calibre arm as in your $75 big game rifle.

You want the Remington single shot at from $3 to $6, .22, .25-10 or .32 calibre, made by the same people who make the famous Remington Autoloading Rifles.

Or, if you prefer the repeating rifle, the Remington slide action .22 repeater with its easy take-down and special safety features, shooting .22 short, .22 long or .22 long rifle cartridges, at $10 and up, is your arm. Sold by first dealers in this community—the most popular small calibre rifles in America.
